Toronto, December 2.

On Saturday evening, the jury in the Hyams case, after deliberating for four hours, returned a verdict of not guilty. Justice Ferguson discharged the prisoners, but they had hastily

Harry Hyams, was specially charged with forgery.

All day the excitement about the Court-house was something unprece-

PROVINCIAL EXPENDITURES.

It is claimed by the Grits that the Conservative Government of the Dominion is unnecessarily extravagant, and that the formation of a "Reform" Government at Ottawa would lead to a reduction of taxation and expenditure. To accept such a theory it is necessary to shut one's eyes to the facts connected with Dominion expenditure, and to blot out of remembrance the record of the "Liberal" Administration of the Dominion from 1873 to 1878, and also that of the previous one, which the Liberals have ruled or are ruling.

The expenditure of the Dominion, under a Conservative Administration, has been all but stationary for the last eight years. During the five years the Grits were in power the expenditure increased 22 per cent, and the debt from $95,848,402 to $140,302,000. The expenditure and debt of every province under "Liberal" rule have also greatly increased.

In Ontario the Liberals came into power in December 1871. The expenditure that year was $1,816,784. The expenditure in 1884 was $4,068,257. And more than that. Stephen Mackenzie's surplus of $5,000,000 in hand cash is also gone. The debt in 1871 was nothing; in 1883 it was $1,401,598. payable under the annuity system extending over a period of 40 years. They had also sold about $15,000,000 worth of the people's timber and spent the money. In Ontario the expenditure under a Liberal Administration, has doubled, and the debt grown from nothing to the figure given above.

In Quebec the Liberal Government came into power in January 1887. The expenditure in 1888 was $5,032,007. In 1891, when the Liberal Government went out, it was $4,095,020. In 1888 the debt of Quebec was $19,068,023; in 1891 it was $25,842,148. A Liberal Administration in Quebec, in five years, increased the expenditure by one-third and the debt practically the same extent. It also incurred liabilities on behalf of the Province which have since become a charge upon its revenues, and necessitated the borrowing of some five millions more.

In Nova Scotia the Liberals came into power in July, 1884. The expenditure in 1885 was $541,091; in 1892 it was $822,462. The debt of Nova Scotia in 1884 was $1,014,744; in 1893 it was $3,142,022. The Liberal Administration in Nova Scotia has increased the expenditure by one-third and multiplied the debt three times.

In New Brunswick the Liberals came into power in March, 1883. In 1882 the expenditure was $614,236; in 1893 it was $898,090. In 1882 the debt of New Brunswick was $1,898,372; in 1893 it was 2,792,297. The Liberals in New Brunswick increased the expenditure, and more than doubled the debt.

In Manitoba the Liberals came into power in January, 1887. The expenditure of Manitoba in 1887 was $250,130; in 1894 it was $632,000. In 1887 the debt of Manitoba was $222,106; in 1893 it was $4,388,250. The Liberals in Manitoba have added to the expenditure by one-fifth and doubled the debt.

In the provinces, before the Liberals attained power, they were as profuse in their promises of economy and retrenchment in provincial affairs as they now are in the Dominion affairs. There is no evidence of retrenchment or any other way. There is no evidence of economy. There is no evidence of any other way. There is no evidence of any other way.

LABOR NOT "ON THE FREE LIST."

Why did our Canadian workmen object to free China, and indignation? And why did the Government impose a duty of $50 on every immigrant from China coming to this country? Because it was known that if the Chinese swarmed in it would not be our own wages in the end. It was just because the high cost of labor could not be contained in this respect on a free field with the lower that the higher civilization had to put brains into the scale and protect itself. If, then, we protect ourselves against Chinese labor, why should we not protect ourselves against the lower level of labor as represented by imported goods? But some Grit friends say, "labor is on the free list," and at first sight the statement appears to have something in it, but when thoughtfully considered it is utter nonsense. Does the Englishman, or the Frenchman, or the German when he lands in Canada bring his rate of wages with him? No, he at once adopts our higher standard of living and consumes as necessities what would have been the greatest luxuries to him in the land he left. He, therefore, does not enter into competition with our workmen here in any sense like he did under the lower standard of living in his former home. Because the Chinaman will not adopt our standard of living, but competes with our workmen here on conditions similar to what he would in his own land, we make him pay a tax on coming into the country.

"The Common People."

As Abraham Lincoln called him, do not care to argue about their ailments. What they want is a nation that will cure them. The simple, honest statement: "I know that the Chinaman cured me. It is the best argument in favor of this method."

RT. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION.

They met to receive a Report of the Building Committee.

There was a well attended meeting of St. Andrew's congregation held last evening in the lecture room of the new church.

The object of the meeting was to receive the report of the Building Committee, but as all the members had not been received only a partial report of the committee was given.

During the meeting the following resolution was carried unanimously:

Moved by Wm. Webster, seconded by A. McPherson, that the church and the continued acts of kindness and courtesy extended by him, and by his staff to the congregation during their continued occupation of the college, and also that Mr. Bege be assured that both minister, office bearers and people retain most pleasant memories of their association to looker for their return next year under his hospitable roof.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary to Mr. Bege.

They also presented Mr. Bege with a permanent pen in the church.

The Past Committee met immediately after the congregational meeting and allotted seats to those who had applied for them.

Chief Hill, of the Six Nation Reserve, has sent to the State Department an exceedingly interesting and valuable relic of early Canadian history. It is a certificate signed by the celebrated Chief Joseph Barret, Testimony, testifying to the bravery of one of his lieutenants, John Barret, in the war of 1812. Chief Hill also writes that he has a historic document signed by John A. Stevenson, late lieutenant of the 99th Regiment, and by John Norton, who served as a soldier in the war of 1775-1781. It is thought the Government would do well to purchase this and place them in one of the historic collections.

The Mystery Not Yet Cleared Up
Persons Viewed the Dead Body

Buffalo, Dec. 5.—There were 100 visitors at the morgue today prompted either by simple curiosity or by the thought that they possibly might have known the young man who committed suicide at the street boarding-house, and who first supposed to be Nellie Burro Hamilton, Ont. Not one of them her. Coroner Tucker thinks the mystery will be cleared away, as he telegraphed to the authorities in principal Canadian towns. He said she was a country girl, and believed that the news of her death will reach her relatives through the Canadian press.

A letter from James McPherson Cleveland, describes a young man who formerly lived at St. Catharines, Ont., and who the writer found the Buffalo suicide. The description not sufficiently lucid to assist identification. Another letter received from "The Home," 130 avenue, Toronto, and signed Ader Stern. It is as follows:—Regarding the unknown body serving the item from Buffalo Toronto News as to a young woman, proved to be a Canadian found Mrs. O'Noll's, 508 Main street, from the description it might be the woman who has lately been stopping at a Falls, N.Y. If so there are nurses in Buffalo, Miss McCauley at 673 Michigan street, and Shaw, at the General hospital, to whom could identify the body of that of Miss Minnie Rollins, and oblige."

At two o'clock this afternoon W. Thompson, of Stratford, Ont., who previously telegraphed the coroner to hold the girl for identification, was in the city, and went direct to morgue. He viewed the body, and all the others who have seen it, to recognize it. Mr. Thompson, he was looking for his cousin, Stratford, who had been Annie Mattox, who had been in from home for about a year. Mattox, it seems, said before she away:—"You will never hear again." She was heard of some later as being in Buffalo, but heratives were not able to get in munication with her. Miss Mattox's home was near Barrie, Ont.

Coroner Tucker says he will the body a week longer. It is claimed by that time, it will be disposed of as all unclaimed bodies are buried in the Potter's field. The coroner expects that two Buffalo women mentioned in a note from Toronto suggesting that the suicide might have been Miss Minnie Rollins, formerly of that city, will visit the morgue to-morrow.

Dr. Victor C. Bell, professor New York Dental College, says it are becoming a toothless people.

MONTREAL CENTRE.

JAMES McSHANE, LIBERAL CANDIDATE.

"Give me McShane, to assist me in Parliament," cried the leader of the opposition, at a political meeting held a few days ago, in the County of Jacques Cartier, "and I will do justice to the minority in Manitoba." Mr. McShane, who had just accepted a standard bearer of the Grit-Rouge party in the contest now going on in Centre Montreal to fill the vacancy created in the constituency by the election of Mr. Curran to the Legislature. It is gratifying to know that the more respectable of the Liberal party in Montreal refused to be dragged through the Grit political cesspool of that city even at the earnest request of that pure (i) politician, Mr. Laurier, who now leads them. As an evidence of the estimation in which Mr. Laurier's candidate is held, we quoted in yesterday's issue from the Montreal Witness, of the 2nd inst., one of the Grits of the Grit journals in Canada, a strong denunciation of McShane and the leaders who control the Grit party in that part of the country.

That outspoken condemnation of Mr. McShane had of course to be accompanied by the usual charge of "corruption" and "extravagance" against the present Government. Let the reader carefully analyze the Witness' charge against its own party, and what will be found:

1. That the leading organ of the party, the Herald, tries to prevent Sir William Hingston from entering the contest by appealing to his respectability and pride, and asking "how will a man of your character feel if defeated by a man like Mr. McShane?" Has it come to this? the reform organ should try to prevent a gentleman of standing and character in the community from accepting a nomination for Parliament in one of the largest and most important commercial centres in Canada on the ground that it would be a disgrace to be beaten by their own chosen candidate? Truly does the Witness answer the question that a victory for William Hingston would be a disgrace to the Liberal party and the constituency?

2. That the Liberal party should bring out a respectable man, upon whom the party could unite.

3. That "the Liberals in this part of the country (Montreal) are dogged by a lot of bores, who can make a regular Tammany out of their administration if they can get their way."

What a vivid and truthful portrait of the managers of the Grit-Rouge party of the Canada. Sketched by a friendly hand, it must be accepted as a correct likeness.

Yet the Witness extols Mr. Laurier as the man who should guide the destinies of Canada, forgetting, we must carefully suppose, that this same Mr. Laurier, in the speech of his soul, "give me Mr. McShane so that I settle the Manitoba school question?" O tempora! O mores!!!

IT WON'T DO!

The Globe, which a few years ago insisted upon free trade and direct taxation being made the policy of the party, declares, in an article in its issue of the 5th inst., "absolute free trade is out of the question; free trade as it is in England" is out of the question; direct taxation is "out of the question."

As Mr. Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright are on record in favor of free trade as it is in England, (which means free luxury as well as the Globe, we leave those worthies to fight it out.

The people can have no interest in a contest between those heads and guides of a party who have the policy in which they will adhere for a moment so soon as they perceive that it is unpopular. Sir Richard Cartwright is the only one amongst them who has the slightest regard for consistency, and perhaps he may be no more polite to his twisting, slippery colleagues than he was to the manufacturers in 1878.

By and by the Grit "policies" as to commercial matters will outmaster the constitutions which France has had during the past century. But none of them will do.

FREE TRADE DOESN'T MEAN LOWER TAXES.

Hon. Edward Blake, then Liberal leader, speaking at Malvern, Ont., on the eve of the elections in 1887, and "No man, I care not how convinced an advocate of Free Trade for Canada he may be, has suggested—no man, I believe, can suggest—a practical plan whereby our real revenue needs could be met, otherwise than by the continued imposition of very high duties on goods similar to those we make, or can make, within our bounds, or on the raw material. I invite the most ardent Free Trader to put his life to present a plausible solution of this problem, and I contend that he is bound to do so before he talks of Free Trade as practicable in Canada."

Hon. Mr. Laurier, now Liberal leader, speaking at Winnipeg, September 3, 1894, said: "When the Liberal party comes into power, to get the money which will be lost if we take off some of the present taxation, and to make up the deficit which will arise, it will be necessary to get an addition from some other source."

EDITORIAL BRIEFINGS.

The Hamilton Spectator demonstrates very clearly from his own mouth that John Charlton, the Yankee M.P. for North Norfolk, is untruthful. It is almost a waste of space to do so, as no one who has watched Judas Charlton's public career would for a moment believe any statement made by a man who is false to his country, false to his leader, false to his party, and false to his professions of special regard for the Sabbath.

LIFE ON A FARM.

Harriet Clifford sat in front of the fire, her pretty hands lying in her lap, and her face lit up in the twilight. She was very pleasant to look upon, and her eyes, from the arched brows, looked at her with earnest, steady gaze, as if she may contemplate a pretty picture.

"To think that you should prefer a farmer's life out west," said Harriet, "you would not like to be a farmer's wife, then?"

"I would like to be a galley slave," said Harriet, "but I like to live doing my own work, and wear pretty dresses and French slippers, and—perhaps one day a summer dress and I don't work."

John went to the little half-bath and looked at the clock. It was half past seven. He had to get up at half past eight.

John went to his room in the western part of the house, and the three and twelve which served to while away her leisure hours.

But as the days crept on Harriet Clifford became conscious of a growing vacuum in her life. Until John Agnew went away, she never had known how she had grown to expect his visits, and remember and treasure up his words.

And Harriet dropped a little, she scarcely knew why, and Aunt Maria carried a month at the seaside.

Just about that time Sabrina Elton came from the far west, and Harriet asked her to tea the first week of the month.

"Is it very lonely out west?" asked Harriet.

"It's splendid," said the young lady. "Lonely indeed? Why, they have the quiet society out there in the world. I wouldn't come back here for anything."

"I once knew a gentleman who went to Wisconsin," said Harriet, diplomatically, "a Mr. Agnew."

"Mr. Agnew? Why, that Sabrina, with wild eyes, he owns the most farm to papa's, and we like him so much! Papa says he is so thoroughly in earnest in whatever he does. And you would like to know him?"

"Yes."

"Strange he has never spoken of you."

"Not at all strange," said Harriet, biting her lip. "I dare say he has forgotten me long ago."

And Harriet began to talk very fast and disconcertingly about something else.

"Harriet doesn't look a bit well," said Sabrina, before she took her leave. "Mrs. Clifford, why won't you let her come home with me for a few weeks? Our western friends would love her."

"What do you say, Harriet?" asked Harriet, looking at her.

"I—should like to go," said Harriet, hanging her head. "Only for a little while, you know, mamma."

Harriet praised the beautiful west with sufficient enthusiasm to gratify even Sabrina.

"It's a pity Mr. Agnew has gone to Chicago," said Sabrina, "but he'll be back before a long time. In the meantime you can amuse yourself very tolerably with the St. Mary's."

For Mr. Skyeson, a rich cattle farmer in the neighborhood, had fallen desperately in love with the pretty little eastern lassie, and made no secret whatever of his infatuation.

It would be difficult, however, to describe Mr. Agnew's astonishment, one lovely afternoon, evening, entering the Elton domain, to see Harriet sitting on the doorstep.

"Yes," said Harriet, laughing, "it is I. How do you do, Mr. Agnew?"

And Mr. Agnew, instead of riding on to the nearest post, as he had intended to do, stayed and spent the evening.

Oh, how much, however, Mr. Agnew walked in with a tiny flower-pot under his arm.

"Here is the geranium you wanted, Miss Sabrina," he said, glancing rather disconcertingly round the room. "Where is Harriet?"

"She's out in the garden," said Sabrina, jerking her crocheted needle viciously through a series of worsted loops. "I haven't a bit of patience with her!"

"Why not?"

"Because I had made up my mind to have her for a neighbor, and she has just gone and demolished all my castles in the air."

"What do you mean?"

"She has refused George Skyeson."

"A perfectly unpardonable offence," said Agnew gravely. "I don't wonder you are out of patience with her. I'll go out in the garden and see what on earth she means by such atrocious conduct."

Harriet stood in the checked shade of the vines, her pretty forehead pressed against the trellis bar, and her hands mechanically toying with the leaves, while her half-filled basket of purple fruit bore a mute witness to her mood.

"Yes," answered Harriet defiantly. "I could have told him that you did not wish to be a farmer's wife. You said so yourself."

"I suppose a poor girl can have the privilege of changing her mind," said Harriet, flushed.

"And, of course, you know what followed."

And Sabrina Elton had Harriet for a neighbor after all.

She Would Hasten.

Old lady—"And so you expect to get married when you grow up?"

Little girl—"Of course. Everybody gets married. I won't say 'no' like Aunt Lucy did, and be an old maid—no, indeed."

"Perhaps you won't like those who ask you?"

"Oh, yes I will, I guess. I feel sure that when a real nice grown-up boy comes to ask me to get married I'll be so happy I won't want to run down the banisters."

English Officers in Cuba.

Havana, Dec. 4.—General Suarez Valdes has telegraphed to Captain-General Martinez de Campos, commanding the island, that the British army, and following the operations of the Spanish troops, for distinguished services during the recent engagement near Ciego de Avila, when General Canales met and defeated Maximino Gomez, who is said to have been killed, and a large number of his men were taken prisoner. At the same time General Navarro is reported to have defeated Antonio Maceo at Jibacoa. In both cases the Spanish troops have defeated the insurgent contingents with but slight loss.

The schooner Sultana, after having been looted by the insurgents at San Juan del Sur, was set fire to and burned.

THEIR PUNISHMENTS.

The Angelus bell rang from the tower of the old abbey, and the crowd of monks, many quite old and decrepit, a few young men, were gathered in the large refectory of the house and in the garden. The monks were gathered in the refectory of the house and in the garden. The monks were gathered in the refectory of the house and in the garden.

Heating this, the lady rose hastily and went to her room. She found her husband's door open, and she saw him sitting at his desk, writing. She went in and found him writing. She went in and found him writing.

Every day at the same hour for 13 years had that lady been seen passing through the garden. She was seen passing through the garden. She was seen passing through the garden.

Accompanied by her husband she arrived one evening, as already stated, at the abbey. She arrived at the abbey. She arrived at the abbey.

From the day they had settled in their modest abode they had led a very quiet life. They were known as Sister and Signora Neeloni.

The husband, a strong, tall man, with an almost athletic physique, appeared, at the time, to be about 50 years of age, his wife not more than 25.

They were never seen together. He went hunting or took long walks, and she stayed at home. They were never seen together.

Both seemed sad, of a gloomy and desolate sort of sadness, which they approached them. They approached them. They approached them.

Reaching the garden gate, as if fighting an inward resistance, she stopped and looked back. She looked back. She looked back.

In the hall she found a servant, who to the mute question of her look, answered.

"Still in the same condition, Signora," she put her hand and bowed. She bowed. She bowed.

Little by little, she grew accustomed to the darkness, she could perceive his convulsed and livid features. She perceived his convulsed and livid features. She perceived his convulsed and livid features.

A woman who had been watching at the bedside had left the room as soon as the signora had entered. She had left the room. She had left the room.

The lady seated herself and let her mind turn once more to her husband. She let her mind turn once more to her husband. She let her mind turn once more to her husband.

It was the old, old story. She met a young man. They met. They met.

At first it was innocent friendship, then the storm of passion. One day her husband, returning home, found them together, their hands clasped. He found them together, their hands clasped. He found them together, their hands clasped.

"What? What? There's nothing frank about it," she said. She said. She said.

"On a sign of her husband, the young man, humiliated and vilified, had departed. She had departed. She had departed.

Her husband had resigned his command in the army, and had gone to live on that mountain, assuming a false name, hiding his secret from all. He hid his secret from all. He hid his secret from all.

In that terrible isolation she had suffered through all the stages of despair. She suffered through all the stages of despair. She suffered through all the stages of despair.

As she had lived, hope alone remained. She had lived, hope alone remained. She had lived, hope alone remained.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—(Special).—A big Liberal mass meeting in favour of Mr. James McShane is to be held on Wednesday, the 18th inst., when Messrs. Wilfrid Laurier, D. C. Fraser, M.P. for Guysboro; L. H. Davies, M.P. for St. John's, and J. A. A. McLean, P. leader of the Opposition in P.E.I., will be present. Also, Messrs. Edward Island; George W. Ross, Minister of Education in Ontario, will address the meeting. The next evening a meeting will be held in the

The statement that an English-speaking member of the Society of Jesus had been selected to go to Beaulieu to attend to the spiritual needs of the prisoner Shortis was confirmed this morning, when it was learned at the college that the Rev. Father Devine, a member of the order well known in Montreal, had been sent to the Superior. The reverend gentleman has already had one interview with the condemned man, and will spend the whole of to-day and return to the city, and probably again close a week before the end of May with Shortis until the maintenance of the law is carried out. Whether this will ever be appears to be a question of doubt, as there can be little doubt that almost superhuman efforts are being made to save the youth from paying the extreme penalty for his crime. Mr. G. G. Porter, who has been in Ottawa for several days past, and was expected to return to Montreal this morning.

Mr. Joseph A. Descaries has accepted the Conservative nomination for Jacques Cartier county, and the campaign on the Government side was expected to-night by a mass meeting at St. Laurent, which was attended by Mr. J. A. Oulmet, Minister of Public Works; Dr. Lachapelle, M.P., and others. Mr. Oulmet made a strong speech, in which he forcibly expounded the Government's policy and determination to render justice to a Dr. Lachapelle, who also spoke, referred to Mr. Clarke Wallace's resignation, and said that the Government was trying to keep faith with the Catholics, a position that was evidently not pleasing to some people.

The meeting was enthusiastic for the Conservative candidate. Mr. DeCarrie having accepted the Conservative nomination for the House of Commons, has sent in his resignation as member of the county at Quebec and a new election will be necessary to fill the vacancy. Mr. DeCarrie

Furnishing Goods Department.

There are lots of people in Belleville who do not know what a fine class of goods we have in this line, and customers that we can not suit are as rare as hens' teeth. In Ties for winter wear we have them in all kinds, checks, stripes, plain or otherwise at all prices and a large assortment to choose from. Also we excel in Gloves, Braces, Underwear and Shirts, in Flannel all shades, White Shirts at all prices and all sizes, Fancy Shirts, &c, and our motto is "Shirts that are Shirts," as we are cranks on the subject of shirts and we are bound to do the trade in this line. We also wish it to be known as loudly as we can proclaim it that we have a very fine stock of Hats and Caps in the latest styles, and made by the best makers, and we positively state that we can suit the most exacting customers that ever walked in shoe leather in Fedoras and Soft Hats, in all shades and styles. Caps of all kinds from the cheapest to the most expensive. To the gentlemen of this city who wish to look always neat and dressy we would say that you ought to procure a pair of our

J. S. McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Opposite Footbridge. An Opinion from a Salt Lake City Banker.

Mr. Cyrus L. Hawley, teller of the Utah National Bank, Salt Lake City, writes under date of Oct. 30, 1895:

"I have received, in good order, the Canadian, 'Continent,' 'Joint Stock,' 'Bookkeeping,' 'Exchange,' 'Notes and Bills,' 'Exchange,' 'I have studied them all carefully and pronounced them to be the best books on the subject that I have ever seen."

These books have a wider demand than any other books on the subject of accounting published in the English language. One day this week we filled large orders from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which were separate orders for various parts of British Columbia.

W. B. ROBINSON, 19 years J. W. JOHNSON, F.C.A., principals.

Why Soap?

Don't You Use Soap?

It does away with hard work, don't blot or scold the clothes, nor give them the usual hard rubbing. (See the directions on the wrapper.)

It gives the whitest, sweetest, cleanest clothes after the wash. It prevents wearing and tearing by harsh soaps and hard rubs.

It is highly with Surprise Soap—red drops out. Harmless to hands and first fabric.

Mr. Stewart Ma son Appointed City Solicitor Permanently.

At the regular meeting of the City Council held last evening the following members were present: Mayor Walsdale, Ald. Lundenberg, Lalonde, Lumsden, Green, Marshall, Clark, Hart, Yeomans, Hay, Robinson, Grills, Mackie, Petty, Williams, Roberts.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Dr. Trevelyan, Medical Health Officer, submitted his annual report. The city had been practically free from contagious diseases during the year. Dr. Trevelyan on different streets were recommended to be repaired. He commended the city for the neatness of the market square. He suggested that the meat tables on the market be stored in some clean place. He had found no meat on the market that was unfit for use.

A communication was read from W. R. Aylsworth, County Clerk, stating that the County Council had granted $20 towards purchasing books for the prisoner's library on condition that the city give a like sum.

The reports of the various committees were read.

The Executive and By-Laws Committee recommended that Mr. Stewart Ma son be appointed City Solicitor permanently.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole, Ald. Hay in the chair.

The accounts, recommended by the Executive Committee were passed without discussion.

Geo. McCoy was appointed to take care of the ambulance at $50 per year.

The Market Committee recommended that double windows be placed on the windows of the police court room, the City office and the Treasurer's office.

This item caused a lot of unnecessary discussion and it was finally decided to put new windows on and the remainder do without.

Several accounts, which should have been before the Public Works and other committees, were passed.

The Committee of the Whole rose and reported. Report received, but on motion that it be adopted, Ald. Clarke moved in amendment for the resolution of $66 for the purpose of allowing the report being adopted. Carried. The report was adopted.

A by-law to provide for the appointment of a Solicitor was introduced, read a first, second and third time, passed and numbered 825.

The applicants for the position were W. J. Diamond, S. Macdonald, C. K. McKel, A. R. Douglas and J. P. Thomas, and upon a ballot being taken Mr. Macdonald secured eleven votes of the council, six from the public.

His salary was fixed at $400 per annum.

The by-law to extend the firm of W. W. Chown & Co. was passed.

The by-law respecting excavations on streets was read a second time. The latter by-law calls for a deposit of $5 per lot for the making excavations on the streets and such other sum, not to exceed fifty cents per lot, as a guarantee that the excavator will put in a proper condition after the work is done, and if the work is done properly the deposit will be returned.

Moved by Ald. Yeomans, seconded by Ald. Williams, that the City Engineer and the firemen be paid on the 23rd inst., instead of at the end of the month.

Mr. Yeomans paid a flattering tribute to the work of our city officials.

The motion carried. The Council adjourned.

JOHN BRYANT DEAD.

A Well-Known Resident Taken off With Typhoid.

John Bryant, who has been ill for about three weeks with typhoid fever, died shortly after six o'clock this morning at his home on Humber St.

Deceased was born forty-one years ago near Richfield, Devonshire, Eng., and came to this country when quite young. He learned the trade of a bookbinder and has since been manifested on many of the city's best buildings. He was married about nineteen years ago to Miss Kate Leeson, who has been his faithful wife and companion. He was a good citizen and highly respected by a large circle of friends. The widow and family have the sympathy of all with whom they are acquainted.

The funeral, which will be under the auspices of the Sons of England, will take place at 2:30 Sunday afternoon.

Maids City Lodge of Prentice Boys held a concert in their hall last evening, which was favored by a good attendance.

W. J. Diamond occupied the chair. The leading features of the evening were the songs of Geo. Fox and Mr. Harry Rich.

Mr. Fox sang two very acceptable renditions, and his songs were enthusiastically received.

Mr. Rich is a clever improviser, and his songs and dialogue were fresh and caught the audience on the spot. He has a fine voice, and was suffering from a cold. Miss Lena Lazer and Miss Brown each gave two very acceptable renditions.

Mr. Frank Brimhall sang a solo in good voice. Chalk's orchestra played two overtures very acceptably.

The accompanists were Mrs. Fox, Miss Chalk and Mr. Walter Mills. God bless the Prentice Boys.

CHAPTER I.

CHAPTER I.

Bill was brother to the deputy sheriff, who had been in his day the most feared of all the town.

"If I wanted, I'll be at the Mayor's office. I'm going up to consult him."

This deceived no one. Every man and boy in Rock River knew Ranney was afraid of Steve Nagle, to say nothing of O'Shea. They shouted at calls to him as he went along the street, but they could not blame him very much. There was a sort of horse sense in keeping out of the tiger's way.

The matter was bling discussed in the Mayor's office. Ridings was there, and Judge Brown, and two or three others. Foster of the Saturday Morning Call took a humorous view of the matter, the others did not. Foster quoted a line or two while sharp-nin-

"Mr. Cottle, we who are peaceable and not of powerful physical organization hire you to fight our battle for us. Mr. Mayor, order the constable to the scene of the carnage."

The Mayor smiled faintly. "Mr. Cottle, you know your duty."

"All too well," said Foster.

They all went to the window and looked out. Up the street, clearly outlined in the brilliant light of the moon, came the Tiger. He walked with a curious action as if his legs were made of steel springs. His bare feet glinted, his head was flung back in a wild gesture. He was Red Brian defying the English battle line on Bailey Mace.

"I didn't hit the office. I don't want to take this into this thing to arrest him. I want to see his mandate for 30 days. It's all very well for you fellows to sit here and order me to go and arrest this infernal devil; go and do it yourself."

He flung the star on the floor and walked toward the back stairway. "I'm going to see the governor."

Foster didn't remark: "There's a certain degree of justice in what Mr. Foster says. There are too many commission officials who are not active workers. There's just one man in this country who can arrest Bill Foster."

"You mean Jim?"

"Yes, of course."

"But why?"

"Well, I think it's in an hour ago,"

They looked out of the window at every fresh burst of noise. The tiger still paraded up and down, lapping into the air occasionally with a shrill "Whoroo." He had not yet begun his lion and the activity of a leopard. He was transformed from a slouchy, quaterly, humorous farmer into a serpent. Everybody gave way before him. Behind him followed a howling mob of thin friends. Silence only came when he was alone.

The better citizens kept dropping in at the Mayor's office to ask why that man was not arrested. They were cooled each one off by saying: "I'll deplore you to arrest him, if you wish."

the sound of hurry out in the street, then a word of command that brought them to a halt.

"Here comes Jim!"

Quick, powerful steps were heard on the stairway and Jim came in. He was of moderate height, but the girth of his chest was enormous. His face was dark and handsome. His eyes had something daunt and sorrowful in

CHAPTER II.

He looked sad and weak as he stood at the door, but they knew the stuff which his heart was made.

"If he isn't too drunk, he'll come along when I lay me hand on his shoulder," if he's fighting drunk, it's him," he said to himself, as he went down the street accompanied by Foster.

"Wan comfort," he added, in the one musing way. "Billy nivr shoots. He flats wid him."

"My boy, come home," he said, "and I'll give you a good spanking." His hand on his brother's shoulder, there was no sign of relenting in his eyes. He looked astonished, then surprised, then angry. He stood square at the corner, and his hand showed in a horrible grin. His eyes were staring, and his mouth was open. "Wild? Yes," he answered, "I'll get out of the way," said Jim, with a look of anger. The crowd fell back, and he walked again. "Come home, Billy," he said again, but in a different tone. He saw a man in a blue coat and a red hat, and a young jerk, he rolled the Tiger to the door and fell upon him. But the man rose under him, and a roll of money was thrown on the floor with equal terms.

There was a terrible sight. The two

"Nothing for near upon two hours," was the reply.

“No, it’s a child,” responded Ivya, looking down at the little, torn, and soiled figure of the girl.

“Call the police,” suggested Mrs. Frenchley.

“Oh, no, I wouldn’t do that,” said Ivya, in a low voice, taking her in and giving her some tea.

Mrs. Frenchley was chilled and heart-broken—the General was not here, and she was alone. She insisted, and Ivya was very obedient, that the chance nap was

DECEMBER 24, 1895.

F. W. Fawcett.

THE N flock with their flocks abiding.
They lay on the dewy ground !
And lo! the morning stars the starlight
The sheep lay white around.
When the light of the Lord streamed o'er
And lo! from the heaven above
An angel leaned from the glory,
And sang the song of the angels
He sang that first sweet Christmas,
—The song that shall never cease—
And lo! in the midst of the angels
On earth good-will and peace.

"To you, in the City of David,
A Saviour is born to-day;
And sudden a host of the heavenly ones
Come down to join the glad throng.
Oh, never hath sweeter message (Thrilled home to the souls of men And lo! the heavens themselves had never heard
A gladder choir till then—
And lo! the angels of the Lord
That never on earth shall cease—
Glorious to God in the highest,
And lo! the angels of the Lord,
—The angels of the Lord—"
And shepherds came to the manger,
And lo! carol on the Holy Child,
And calmly o'er that rude cradle
The Virgin Mother sung—
And she sang, in the starry heaven, (Sung forth the song of the angel—
To you in the City of David,
A Saviour is born to-day;
Oh, they sang—and I went that never,
That carol on earth shall cease—
And lo! the angels of the Lord,
—The angels of the Lord—
On earth good-will and peace."

...and Wain.

"CAN pipe, too," he said.

Do you know how a child's eyes look when he has just seen a new beast? How he gazes at vast world, when he feels his wings like a bird, ere the heritage of the sons of toil is thrust upon him? The child was drawn to the snow bank that winter night. He opened the door of the smithy where the members of the clan were gathered, and he began playing force. Every man passed, inured in hand, at the sound of the whistles, shrill young voices.

Then the child, the drifting snowflakes and stepped into their midst. The small feet were shoeless and dark as the earthen floor on which he stood. He was dressed in a tunic around his thin arm in grotesque tatters. But above the tatters rose a face such as God sends into the world, a face that is the crown of the forest, the sweep of the blue eyes as clear and grand, the curve of the lips as proud yet sweet. From the beautiful hair, which was a mass of snow piled, a white, shining, snow-shine like rays.

The child was scarcely time to look at the child when, raising its pipes to his lips, he began to play. The wonderful reeds shone; the thin, brown fingers moved like lightning. The child's face glowed in the sliver. Strong men laid aside their instruments and clasped horns hands to listen; here and there a face was turned away, for the star was waning and he took the pipes.

It smiled as he took the pipes from his lips. He was a child, but he was a laughing boy. They made way for him, yet entertained him as if he had been of a royal caste. A small three-legged stool was placed before him, and he began to play close, as happy as a king. He had then whence he came, as far as he could.

"Over the hills," he said, "far, far over the hills." They called him Piper Tim in caravan, never another name. He was a child, but he was a laughing boy. Then he laughed and stretched his thin brown hands with joy to the stars. He could tell nothing more; he was a child, but he was a laughing boy. And of music had drawn him so that he lingered to listen while the caravan went on.

The smith's wife admired the child's very face; his tatters brought tears to her eyes; womanlike, she gave him some of the food that she had made. The boy more amazed while he played on his pipe, ere, with laughing farewell, he went to his darkness. That night the smith sat up, for he had seen the child's face. He sighed as he turned in at a cottage door, where his wife awaited him.

"How would it ha' been," he said, "if I'd kept the little chap, the piper?"

He would have seen about his age in the Lord spared him.

There was a note of anxious query in his tones. But the starved mother

But the boy's face smiled from every page; the free, fearless voices shone in the crackling flames. The schoolmaster flung aside his book, and was back in the old days, when the hills, and the stars, and the sunshine had been his book, a maiden's eyes his heaven, and the world a world of wonders. He looked at the empty chair of his dead wife, and he thought of sons and daughters far away.

"If I had kept the lad," he mused aloud, "I could have made a man of him, have saved him from the tinker's life; he would have filled my empty home."

Long he dreamt, then a smile of resolu-raised his face to them; they smiled into their twin stars, his eyes. Yet still was there no camp fire.

Tim, growing sore, sat down in the sheltered cranny of a rock. He raised his pipe to his lips. He played a tune that began bravely and ended softly, and more softly still. Tim was asleep. The snowflakes fell like bristling stars; the dawn smiled over the hills, but Tim piped never again.

Little recked the Tinker band that one child less crouched to the fire, one brown hand less stretched to the steaming pot. When the musicians meet in the smithy

NOT much before midnight in a Midland town—a thriving commercial town, whose dingy black streets swarmed with poverty and pety—a man in a soft felt hat and a white tie was hurrying home over a bridge that spanned a dark crowded river. He had missed the car and did not care to be seen out late, but he could not afford a cab. Suddenly he

"That don't matter," broke in the man, almost before he could finish the sentence, "as long as you're not a Catholic. Oh, don't go away now, sir." His voice broke piteously. "Don't go away after I've been chasing you for five minutes. I saw your rig-out—I beg pardon, your coat and hat—in the distance, just as I came out of the house. Walk back with me, anyhow."

"Yes, but my good fellow," protested the minister, "I told you you were making a mistake. You know nothing about religion; but what your wife wants is someone to talk to her of Jesus, or to give her the sacrament, or the confession, or something, for I confess I'm not very clear about the forms of Christianity."

"Oh, but you believe in something!" persisted the man.

"H'm! Yes, I can't deny that," said the minister, "but that's not the point."

Special.—Today

"When he comes again," he said.
And Piper Tim?

He went on his way that night, turning again and again to look at the long, bright gleams that fell on the snow from the great, grey fire. He knew his people were camping in the woods, and to the mountain and darkness he turned his face. There was singing in his heart, there was always singing there, so he went on his way merrily. Up, up, through the blinding snow, neither cold nor hot, he went, singing in that heart of his, he watched always for the gleam of the red camp fire. But he beheld never a spark.

The stars shone out serenely. Tim

On winter nights, and the wind shakes
the snow from trees and mountains, the men look at each other, and sometimes a light breaks over rugged faces.
"Sounds like a tune from Piper Tim," say they.

Occasionally a strange presence seems to fill the place. The smith and the blacksmith see a eager faces, words tremble on their lips, and the fancies that are ever a-jumble in dreamers' hearts have been stirred by the wind's song and the shadow of the dancing flames.

felt a tug at his long black coat-tail. Vaguely alarmed and definitely annoyed, he turned round quickly. A breathless, roundly plump, rugged featured man loomed behind his hold of the skirt.

"Scuse me, sir—I've been running," he zapped.

"What is it? What do you want?" said the gentleman impatiently.

"My wife is dying," jerked the man.

"I'm really sorry," murmured the gentleman incredulously. "I'm not a doctor."

"No, sir, I know. I didn't want a doctor. He's there and only gives her ten minutes to live. Come with me at once, please."

"Come with you? Why, what good can I do?"

he pleased, seeing the Jew's hesitation.

The man's accent was so poignant, his anxiety was so apparently sincere, that the minister's humanity could not scarcely remain unmoved. He went to walk back at least.

"Why don't you go to your own clergyman?"

"I've got none," said the man half apologetically. "I don't believe in nothing myself. But you know what women are! Betsey goes some place every Sunday afternoon; sometimes she goes to church, sometimes she goes before I'm up, and so long as the breakfast is ready I don't mind. I don't ask her no questions, and in return she don't bother about my soul—leastways, not for these ten years, ever."

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and a small tear near the bottom center. A faint horizontal line is visible near the top edge, possibly indicating a fold or a binding edge. The overall tone is warm and vintage.

Thomas Onton, 122 E. 12th St., discovered smoke issuing from a building at 11th and W. 12th St. He called the fire department, and the 20th Battalion arrived within 10 minutes. The fire was between the clothing store and the liquor store, and shortly after 11:30 a. m. it had spread to Mr. McGreggor's store. The fire had the fire alarm, and Mr. McGreggor's stock of clothing, valued at $2,500, is lost by water, and the clothing is considerably damaged. The stock valued at $1,000 is insured for $500. The loss by Mr. Henry Lindop, who has a clothing store, is $1,000. The fire originated under Mr. McGreggor's store, but how is a mystery.

MOTHERHOOD.

Lily E. Mackay in Millard Monthly.
O NE morning fair, my baby
Climbed up into my bed,
And down upon my shoulder
She laid her little head.
She had her precious dolly
Clasped in a close embrace
She told me how she loved it,
And kissed its battered face.
I asked her if she couldn't
For only one short day,
Give me her precious dolly
To take with me away.
She slipped her arm around me
And tears came to her eye,
She batted with them bravely
And sweetly said, "I'll try!"
"But, mamma, while my dolly
Is gone away from me,
I shall come other dolly Whose mamma I can be!"
I wondered if she bravely
My sorrow I could bear
If asked to give my darling
Back to my Father's care.

IDEAL PARENTS AND CHILDREN.

ON the principle that bachelors wives and old maid's children are parasites, we would suggest that ideal parents are those who have not such children.
The birth of her child was thus recorded in her diary by Margaret Fuller: "I am the mother of an immortal being. God is merciful to me a sinner."
This is the spirit in which the best parents enter upon their office; they feel their responsibility and look to the Father in heaven for help.
A friend asked a lady who knew to be very intelligent, "Why have you never written a book?" "I am writing two," was the quiet reply, "and have been engaged on one for ten years, the other five." "What profound wisdom they must be!" "Well, whatever they are and whatever they become, they are my lifework, for I am speaking of my two children." Contrast this with the following case: The son of an eminent lawyer, being being sentenced for a crime, was asked by the "Judge," "Did you ever your father?" "Perfectly," said the youth; "whenever I entered his presence he said, 'Run away, my son, and don't trouble me.' The great lawyer was thus unable to complete his famous work on "The Law of Trusts, and his son in due time furnished a practical commentary on the way in which his father had discharged that most sacred of all trusts, committed to him in the person of his own child.

"to the question, 'At what age would you educate a child?' a wise man answered, 'Twenty years before he is by educating his father and mother.' In the training of children it is character that takes up, and no amount of preaching will take up for its decision. The cult and religious instruction will avail little if the atmosphere of the home teaches the children to be more concerned about money than good will, to resort to sneaking ways, to put on false appearances, to be eager to talk about the faults and failings of others. If parents wish children to curb their tempers and passions, they must do the same themselves.
Only the other day I heard a boy of five say to his father, 'You must not be cross, for if you are I shall be that when I grow up.' 'At men who cry and all that women are those whose fathers spoke rudely to their wives. As he was picking his way carefully along a mountain side, a father kept behind him the voice of his child, "Take a safe path, papa; I'm coming after you."

Local parents try to be as just as possible towards their children and never genuine any thing, either a sweetest or a whipping, without giving it. A mother gently reproved her child who had been rude. The child soon forgot and repeated the offence. The mother firmly said:
"Sarah, if you do that again I will punish you." Sarah did it again and became frightened for the consequences. A young boy present said: "Never mind; I will ask your mother not to whip you." "Oh," said Sarah, "that will do no good. My mother never tells lies."

Let us never forget that "the little cradle of the child is more easily darkened than the stony heaven of the man."
Rudeness, we are told, was able by a single stroke of his brush to convert a laughing into a crying child. In life we can do all this, but we should be careful not to do so. When we have to find fault, we had better wait until we are quite calm, and then do it with regret. "I would have punished you," said Archy to his slave,
"if I had not been sorry."

Happy are the children whose parents have no "moods" in their treatment of them. They can dispense with many in-judges if they know certainly what will merit praise and what will merit condemnation. The parent who gives these not in accordance with justice but according to the brightness or gloom of his momentary feelings, gains as little respect as he deserves from his children.
The government of many parents is too negative. They tell their children ten times what not to do and only once what to do. Instead of teaching principles of conduct, they deal almost altogether in prohibitions. A little child who was being educated if it can be called education in this "thick-skinned" style, was asked her name, "Lily," she answered,
"And what is your other name, my dear?"
"My mother calls me 'Lily Don't,'"
here must be prohibitions, of course, especially with young children, but let them be as few as possible, and firmly enforce them.

Our children have come more recently from God, and know many things which we have forgotten. They are, too, as much entitled to live their own lives

as we are to live ours.
Ideal parents are reverent towards their children, and feel that their duty is to direct rather than to control, and that the love which has fallen to the lot of most of us, by saying:

"Be good, dear child, and let who will be clover."
Do noble things—not dream them all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever,
One grand, sweet song."

THE BRAKESMAN AT CHURCH.

BY ROBERT J. BURETT.

O me comes the brakeman, and seating himself on the arm of the seat says:
"I went to church yesterday."

"Yes!" I said, with that interested infection that asks for more.
"And what church did you attend?"
"Which do you guess?" he asked.
"Some union mission church?" I hazarded.

"Naw," he said, "I don't like to run on those branch roads very much. I don't often go to church, and when I do I want to run on the main line, where your run is regular and you go on a schedule time and don't have to wait on connections. I don't like to run on a branch. Good enough, but I don't like it."

"Episcopal?" I guessed.
"Limited Express," he said; "all palace cars and two dollars extra for a seat; fast time, and only stop at big stations. Nice line, but too exhaustive for a brakeman. All train men in uniform, conductor's punch and lantern alighted, and no train boys allowed.
Then the passengers are allowed to talk back at the conductor; and it makes them too free and easy. No, I couldn't stand the palace cars. Rich road, though.
Don't often hear of a receiver being appointed for that line. Some mighty nice people travel on it, too."

"Universalist?" I suggested.
"Broad gauge," said the brakeman,
"does too much complimentary business.
Everybody travels on a pass. Conductor doesn't get a fare once in fifty miles, stops at all flag stations, and won't run into anything but a union depot. No smoking-car on the train. Train orders are vague though, and the train men don't get along well with the passengers.
No, I don't go to the Universalist, though I know some awfully good men who run on that road."

"Presbyterian?" I asked.
"Narrow gauge, eh?" said the brakeman, "pretty track, straight as a rule, tunnel right through a mountain rather than go around it; spirit level grade; passengers have to show their tickets before they get on the train. Mighty strict road, but the cars are a little narrow; have to sit on a seat and no room in the aisle to dance. Then there's no stop over tickets allowed; got to go straight through to the station you're ticketed for, or you can't get on at all. When the car's full no extra coaches; cars built at the shops to hold just so many and nobody else allowed on. But you don't often hear of an accident on that road. It's run up to the rule."

"May be you joined the Free Thinkers?"
I said.
"Scrab road," said the brakeman; "dit red and no ballast; no time-card and no train despatcher. All trains run wild and every engineer makes his own time, just as he pleases. Smoke if you want to;

kind of go-as-you-please road. Too many side-tracks, and every switch wide open all the time, with the switchman sound asleep and the target lamp dead out. Get on as you please and get off when you want to. Don't have to show your tickets, and the conductor isn't expected to do anything but amuse the passengers. No, sir, that road run in the country where the passengers feel more at home. No passes;
every passenger pays full traffic rates for his ticket. Wesleyan house strikes on all trains, too; pretty safe road, but I didn't ride over it yesterday.

"Maybe you went to the Congregational church?" I guessed.
"Ah, ha!" said the brakeman; "she's a daisy, isn't she? river road; beautiful curves; sweep around anything but keep close to the river. Takes a heap of water to run it through double tanks at every station, and there isn't an engine in the shops that can pull a pound or run a mile in less than two ounces. But it runs through a lovely country; these river roads always do; river on one side and hills on the other, and it's a steady climb up the grade all the way till the river ends before the fountain head of the river begins. Yes, sir, I'll take the river road every time for a lovely trip, sure connections and good time, and no prairie dust blowing in at the windows. And yesterday when the conductor came around for the tickets with a little basket punch, I didn't ask him to pass me, but I paid my fare like a little man—twenty-five cents for an hour's run and a little concert by the passengers thrown in. I tell you, Pigerm, you take the river road when you want."

But just here the long whistle from the engine announced a station, and the brakeman hurried to the door shouting:
"Zionville! Zionville!" This train makes no stops between here and Indianapolis!

SPRINGTIME.

Some enthusiasm. "Nice road, eh? Fast time and plenty of passengers. Engines carry a power of steam and don't you forget it; steam gauge shows a hundred and enough all the time. Lively road; when the conductor shouts 'all aboard,' you can hear him to the next station. Good, whole-souled, companionable conductors;
ain't a road in the country where the passengers feel more at home. No passes;
every passenger pays full traffic rates for his ticket. Wesleyan house strikes on all trains, too; pretty safe road, but I

A STORY OF THE CIVIL WAR.

IN the elegantly furnished parlor of one of the largest hotels of Boston the other day were two men. They were the only occupants of the room at that hour, and were in marked contrast to each other.

One was a young man of about thirty, dark of hair and complexion, and athletic of build. Nobody would hesitate a moment in pronouncing him a Southerner. The other was a venerable old gentleman, whose garb indicated the clergyman. His refined look and general appearance indicated that he was a New Englander, if not a native of Boston itself.

"Excuse me, sir," said the Texan, for such he was, approaching the old gentleman, "my wife and myself are strangers in Boston. We would like very much to see the Decoration day ceremonies. Would you be so kind as to inform me where, and how, they can be seen to the best advantage?"

"With all the pleasure in the world," replied the older gentleman. "I expect to take part in the ceremonies myself. If you and your wife will accompany me to-morrow, you will have the opportunity you desire. My name is Winthrop, Reverend John Winthrop of this city."

For a moment there was a strange expression on the young Texan's face, but it was only momentary. Extending his hand, he said cordially:

"I am happy to make your acquaintance, and we will gladly avail ourselves of your kind offer. My name is Frank Kennedy, of Ellis County, Texas."

Instead of taking the proffered hand of the young man, Mr. Winthrop recoiled as if he had put his foot upon a rattlesnake, gazing at the stranger with an expression of mingled horror and anger, the old gentleman exclaimed:

"Frank Kennedy from Texas!"

"Yes," replied the astonished Texan, "that is my name. Is there anything surprising in that?"

Mr. Winthrop had sunk into a chair, and gazing at the young man repeated the name as if he could hardly credit his senses.

"Yes," replied Kennedy, "I am not in the habit of traveling under an assumed name. It seems to me, if you are the gentleman you seem to be, you will, at least, give me some explanation for this extraordinary scene."

"I will do so, sir, as far as it is to me," said the old man fiercely.

"That's precisely what I do want," responded the Texan, drawing up a chair and seating himself opposite to the clergyman.

"At the beginning of the Rebellion," said Mr. Winthrop, speaking very rapidly, "my only daughter was living with her husband in your State, in the city of Austin. Being from the North it is not strange that their sentiments were in favor of the Union, and that they should desire to return to their own people. My son-in-law delayed his departure from Texas until the only avenue open to them was to return home by way of Mexico."

The Texan nodded gravely, as much as to say he understood the situation perfectly.

"My son-in-law and his wife, with their infant, had almost reached the Rio Grande, when one morning they were treacherously murdered while in camp. My daughter's husband was strung up to a tree, his body left a prey to the vultures. And this was done by Confederate soldiers."

THE LOOKING-BEE.

daughter, shook his head and asked: "Am I dreaming, or has his dead sister come back to put flowers on his grave?"

Monroe was, even in his own time, called "a gentleman of the old school."

Henry Clay was said to make the most engaging bow of any gentleman of his time.

Andrew Jackson was rough in his manner.

Mr. Winthrop, believing as you do that my father murdered your daughter and her husband, it would be strange if your feelings towards me were other than they are. I have listened to your story. Will you listen to mine?"

Mr. Winthrop nodded mutely.

"This occurred in June, 1861."

Another nod.

"At a water-hole called Resaca!"

"Yes."

"And your daughter's maiden name was Mary, and her husband's name was David Lindsay?"

Once more Mr. Winthrop gave assent.

"Mr. Winthrop, your people were murdered by a gang of Corinna's bandits from Mexico, led by a notorious criminal, Pedro Gomez. They committed dozens of such murders on unsuspecting Americans encamped near the Rio Grande. My father, Captain Frank Kennedy, was detailed to exterminate those ruffians. He came upon Gomez and his thugs while they were plundering the camp of your unfortunate relatives. All those Mexicans were shot, except the leader, Gomez. He was captured alive, and it was always a source of pride to my father, who has since passed away, that with his own hands he hung the leader of the troop. The swinging body your friends saw on the tree was not that of your daughter's husband. Your people were decently buried by those Confederate soldiers. Their assassins were left to rot on the prairie. Instead of being the murderer of your daughter, my father, Frank Kennedy, was her avenger."

Mr. Winthrop had slowly risen from his chair and was gazing with unspoken emotions at the Texan.

"I was a child at the time and know nothing of these things personally. All I know is what I learned from my father and from the letters that were picked up in the camp of your murdered dear ones."

"My God! can this be true?"

"Mr. Winthrop, I have indisputable testimony of the truth of what I say. But I have not told you all. There was a golden-haired, blue-eyed little girl—"

THE CAREER OF HENRY M. STANLEY.

Before being permitted to stand as a candidate, he had to become a naturalized subject of the Queen, for it was held that he had lost citizenship in his native country by serving in the American civil war.

As he served on both sides in the war between the States, it is not certain whether it was as a Confederate or a Federal he became for a time an American.

Stanley's election to Parliament is the realization of the ambition of the period of cakes and ale. He represents North Lambeth. A clever writer says that he has had his eye on Parliament ever since his marriage with Miss Dorothy Tennant.

That carried him into the most powerful "set" in England—the brilliant, cynical, but most practical group, the House of Balfour is the exemplar. His sister-in-law, the heroine of the Dodo book, is the wife of Herbert Asquith, the retiring Liberal Home Secretary, so the Tennant family is represented among victors as well as among vanquished. For, of course, Stanley is a Conservative. That is an advantage of consistent American training, that it inspires the true patriot with a most profound respect for the old families of England.

Stanley was as a Tory of the Tories to uphold those traditions which Englishmen (who profit by them) hold dear. He was beaten at North Lambeth in 1895, beaten badly, too, with ballots—and eggs. But his mind was made up that he should sit in Parliament. His eye was fixed on Westminster, and it is not an eye to be denied—light gray, bold, fierce, piercing. Stanley would have made a good baseball player if he could agree with the umpire. His unpopularity is not restricted by geographical lines. His enemies are everywhere.

Emin Pasha, good man, who shared none of Stanley's last for glory, but was philanthropic rather than explorer, hated, distrusted and even feared him. The companions of his youth find no word of favor for him. He is not admitted to the campfires of the veteran correspondents. Of the company whom he led on his last expedition into the horrors of Africa, not over two were his friends after six months of the sort of adventure that binds the hearts of men in wedlock. It may be some dark quality in the man's nature which raises against him the hand of every man with whom he comes in touch; or it may be that fierce overbearing, obstinate, to the point of bloodshed, persistence that shows in every line of the bulky frame, coarse, heavy neck, square jaw and blunt hands, and appears again in the singular daring of the eyes.

At any rate, for whatever cause, Stanley is widely disliked. That he has no reason to be courteous to a world that has given him no more than he has wrung from it is apparent. He was a wife, a pauper's child, bred in a poorhouse. He was christened John Howlands, but after coming to America as a cabin-boy at fifteen he took the name of the merchant who adopted him. When he was barely twenty he enlisted as a private in the Confederate army. He was a simple adventurer even then. He came north, venturing even that early, He came north under which flag he fought. His sword was like Dagdag Dalgat's. When taken prisoner he became a Union man, feverish by the exploits of the Bo-nettes, attracted many ardent souls just after the war, and Stanley became a newspaper writer—or rather a newspaper adventurer. Even to this day he is not quite able to conquer the subtleties of the written language; but he had the force of a capitalist in his enterprises. In 1897 he was marching across Kansas with Hancock and Custer, and interviewing "Wild Bill" Hickok on his career. At the end of the same year he started for Abyssinia with the British army. Later he had a hand in the troubles in Spain—still as a reporter. In 1870 he took the assignment—envied by every piddling journalist at home—that brought him everlasting fame. He was sent to find Livingston. His accomplishment of the mission was as courageous as the journalistic motive that inspired it. But the triumph deprived the world of a picturesque reporter, while adding one to the list of historical "path finders."

Stanley became the explorer of the century. His achievements are so familiar to the people of the world as their own folklore.

The period of his activity has closed. He is married; he has grown stout; he will be one of the noble band of the unknown who dawdle in from the lobby at the sound of the division bell. Whatever may be thought of the benefits of his expeditions—whether the part exploring of Africa's fevered hell was worth the price of bloodshed and pillage paid for it—daughter, shook his head and asked: "Am I dreaming, or has his dead sister come back to put flowers on his grave?"

Monroe was, even in his own time, called "a gentleman of the old school."

Henry Clay was said to make the most engaging bow of any gentleman of his time.

Andrew Jackson was rough in his manner.

Mr. Winthrop, believing as you do that my father murdered your daughter and her husband, it would be strange if your feelings towards me were other than they are. I have listened to your story. Will you listen to mine?"

Mr. Winthrop nodded mutely.

"This occurred in June, 1861."

Another nod.

"At a water-hole called Resaca!"

"Yes."

"And your daughter's maiden name was Mary, and her husband's name was David Lindsay?"

Once more Mr. Winthrop gave assent.

"Mr. Winthrop, your people were murdered by a gang of Corinna's bandits from Mexico, led by a notorious criminal, Pedro Gomez. They committed dozens of such murders on unsuspecting Americans encamped near the Rio Grande. My father, Captain Frank Kennedy, was detailed to exterminate those ruffians. He came upon Gomez and his thugs while they were plundering the camp of your unfortunate relatives. All those Mexicans were shot, except the leader, Gomez. He was captured alive, and it was always a source of pride to my father, who has since passed away, that with his own hands he hung the leader of the troop. The swinging body your friends saw on the tree was not that of your daughter's husband. Your people were decently buried by those Confederate soldiers. Their assassins were left to rot on the prairie. Instead of being the murderer of your daughter, my father, Frank Kennedy, was her avenger."

Mr. Winthrop had slowly risen from his chair and was gazing with unspoken emotions at the Texan.

"I was a child at the time and know nothing of these things personally. All I know is what I learned from my father and from the letters that were picked up in the camp of your murdered dear ones."

"My God! can this be true?"

"Mr. Winthrop, I have indisputable testimony of the truth of what I say. But I have not told you all. There was a golden-haired, blue-eyed little girl—"

SIAM'S STRANGE CUSTOMS AND BARBAROUS RITES.

Full Mail Budget

AMONG the curious customs observed in Siam, and that still maintain to the present day, though modified in some cases through recent contact with Western nations, the following may be of interest: Men are often subjected to severe punishment for very trivial offences, and the many modes adopted, though intensely painful and galling, are borne with apparently complete indifference. It is not an uncommon occurrence for the King to sentence two men to be chained together, who are thus compelled to go about, perhaps for years, yoked in this manner, as no one dare release them without the King's permission, and of course he soon forgets the circumstance. An instance of this character occurred not very long ago, when one of the prisoners died, and the other unfortunate wretch was seen dragging the body of his late companion about beside him, unable to escape from his horrible yoke. The European Consuls in the city, shocked by the sight, endeavored to obtain his immediate release; but, finding the delay occasioned by the absence of the King, the poor fellow became insane and soon afterwards died. When the King goes abroad through the city, or appears at any public function, extreme care is taken by his officers that no person whatever is in any way on the same level or above him; for this

The locality mostly used for this purpose is situated in a valley a short distance outside the city. The morning is the time generally adopted, when crowds of natives may be seen moving towards the spot, arrayed in their gayest colors; and one would imagine that some pleasant and enjoyable *fi*le was about to be held, instead of the most melancholy of all spectacles—the taking of human life. The assembled multitude, sometimes many thousands, arrived at the scene of action, are to be observed laughing and chatting merrily, betting amongst themselves as to whether the executioner will be successful in cutting the man's head off in one blow, or that he may have to strike twice.

The executioner now approaches, dressed in red rag, and armed with a large "dah," or sword. The condemned man is then led up by an escort conducted by a prince, who has charge of the entire affair and is responsible to the King for the successful carrying out of his orders. The headman next proceeds to shake the prisoner's ankles together, bind his hands behind his back, stuff his ears with clay and knead his eyes. He then places him in a kneeling position, and draws a mark upon his neck with some colored earth, to indicate

The Shah's Favorite.

The Shah of Persia, according to foreign papers, has forgotten the little boy who followed him to Europe on his last journey as a tall man, and has made a prime favorite of his Court painter. The artist has won an unbounded influence over His Majesty. One day recently a high official of the empire became filled with a wild desire to see the painter at work in his studio. The painter threw the intruder out and shut the door. But the great man was determined to carry out his plan. He returned to the studio, broke open the door, and re-entered the room. The angry artist fell upon the official and painted his face a bright color. Fearing the displeasure of the great man and his friends he then fled from the studio. But the happy thought came to him to seek the Shah. "Fear not," said His Majesty after hearing the report of the artist.

The Court favorite had hardly finished his story when the official, his face still covered with the fresh paint, presented his complaint to the Shah. "You are wrong," said His Majesty; "you must be punished." He then condemned the official to two years' imprisonment because he had broken into a private room and stolen painters' colors with his cheeks! The unhappy man is now serving his sentence, and the painter is mounting higher and higher in the favor of the Court.

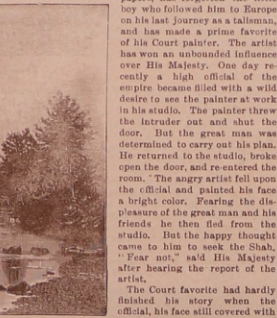

"Why don't I go to work, mum?" said the tramp, repeating Mrs. Cranberry's question. "I'd only be too happy if I could get something to do in my own line of business." "What might that be?" asked the sympathetic woman. "Coloring meerschams, mum."

THE BRIGHT WATERS MEET.

purpose he is placed on a raised dais when inside a building, and when proceeding through the streets all persons are warned to refrain from looking from balconies or windows while His Majesty is passing.

Executions are of frequent occurrence, and the following instance will serve to show the character of the people and the supreme indifference in which human life and suffering are held by them. In this case the victim was a prince—a title not uncommon amongst the population of Bangkok, the capital city—who, for some breach of the law, was condemned to death. The method of execution is interesting, although revolting in detail.

the exact spot to strike. Going to a distance of about twenty paces, he now commences to leap and caper about, uttering cries and brandishing his "dah," all the time advancing rapidly towards his victim, until within striking distance, when he raises his sword as if to give the fatal blow, but does not do so. Again he returns to the same place as before, and goes through a similar performance, which he repeats for the third time, when, rushing suddenly forward, with one sweep of his weapon he severs the head from the body, and the applause of the assembled multitude, who during the proceedings are engaged laughing, and apparently greatly enjoying themselves. Sometimes it happened that the executioner, through lack of skill in dealing the final blow, missed aim and gashes his man in a shocking manner. Should this happen he is instantly seized, and often condemned to death; and another takes his place, who proceeds to go through all the foregoing details, while the unfortunate wretch is meanwhile writhing in agony and bleeding to death. As soon as the condemned is successfully beheaded, the prince in charge proceeds to chop off the head. He then slips the iron over the feet, and conveys both to the King, as a testimony of having performed the duty entrusted to him.

SCENE ON THE COAST OF BRITAIN.

SHOULD WE EVER LAUGH?

IT is not generally known that there are certain individuals—the writer is not sure that they have not formed themselves into a society—whose main object in life is to put down laughter. They do not oppose it on religious or partisan grounds, but purely from the ethical point of view. Now, what is laughter? Mr. Herbert Spencer tells us that it is "an undirected passion that hath no name; but the sign of it is that distortion of the countenance which we call laughter, which is always joy. The passion of laughter is nothing else but sudden glory, arising from a sudden conception of some eminency in ourselves by comparison with the inferiority of others, or with our own former self." This would seem to explain why we laugh at a drunkard, a lunatic, or a man who has fallen in the mire. But surely all laughter is not derived from unkindly

Griggs—How so?

Bridge—Will you believe it, she showed me into the dining room, and she really didn't stay there long.

Griggs—Well, I'm very sorry.

Bridge—Oh, that's all right. You could not help it. But what the mischief did she want to show me into the dining room for?

A BELLE OF THE EAST.

discharge of feeling that affects first the muscles round the mouth, then those of the vocal and respiratory apparatus, then those of the limbs, and then those of the spine. He further calls it "a force evolved in the nervous centers," but does not help us to understand what that force is—merely explains its effects.

According to Thomas Hobbes, "it is a feelings or from personal conceit Carlyle says: "Laughter, if it come from the heart, is a heavenly thing," and "I love honest laughter as I do sunlight." And who does not remember Twelfth-droch's one recorded laugh? "Tears streaming down his cheeks, pipe held aloft, foot clatched into the air—long, long continuing, uncontrollable, a laugh not of the face and diaphragm only, but of the whole man from head to heel." The author adds that "no man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether irrevocably sad," while the "man who cannot laugh is only fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils."

On the other side we have Goldsmith, who wrote of "the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind," and Young, who in his Night Thoughts exclaims: "Lo! mirth, and laughter! Wretched comfort! Laughter, but mere contentment as to be, is half human. Is it much to get by venting spleen or flapping thought, It is a moment or it makes a fool, And also as boring shame, or convulsion. The spite on my tongue spoils the stone That tickles little inside to mirth of me."

This is certainly very severe, but we have the world laughs as heartily as ever if it did not know the worse for it. Richard Steele ranges those who laugh under the heads: "The dimplers, the smilers, the laughers, the grinners, and the horse-laughers," and there is the laugher who, like Lord Byron, would say, "And if I laugh at any mortal thing, 'tis that I may not weep." There is also the laugh of scorn, and the milder laugh of good-humored incredulity. The laughter of a fool, so laughily described in Ecclesiastes as resembling "the crackling of thorns under a pot," is yet of another class.

But despite all that poets and philo-sophers may say concerning the matter, we may be sure that, as every child learns to laugh before he learns to speak, so prehistoric man must have indulged in these ebullitions of mirth even while in the very alphabet of articulate utterance. Moreover, "Laughter, holding both his sides," has been, and will doubtless be to the end of time, a great influence in the world: an influence immeasurably more for good than for evil.

If there is any truth in the maxim, "Laugh and grow fat," perhaps the best course is to laugh moderately and grow moderately fat, remembering that it is better to smile than to weep; better to laugh than to groan. In the words of Shakespeare:—

With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come; And let my liver rather fondle my spleen, Than my heart choke with a moistening fume.

Nevertheless, it is fortunately quite possible to prevent the heart growing cold without heating the liver with wine.—Till this.

"Excuse me, sir," said the beggar, "but did you ever hear it said that money 'bought'?" "I have," said the wayfarer. "Well—would you mind letting me have a dime for a few minutes' chat? I'm awful lonesome."

ACCIDENT AT THE STATION.

On Tuesday night, James Garrison, a coal shoveller, was working on one of the shutters in the G. T. R. yards, he lost his balance and fell a distance of about fifteen feet to the ground, striking on his forehead. He was picked up unconscious and carried to his home, where Mrs. Garrison and her son were summoned to attend him. They did what they could, but he did not regain consciousness. Yesterday Dr. McGill and Dr. Young visited him, but he was still unconscious. He is suffering from compression of the brain. The doctor decided to have him removed to the hospital and the ambulance was summoned about a clock yesterday afternoon for that purpose.

The unfortunate man has only worked a short time in the city. He formerly been a farmer in Huntington Township. His wife died suddenly about six months ago. His mother, a woman about eighty years of age, is keeping house for him and taking care of his two children.

At 1 p. m. today the patient was still unconscious and his condition was regarded as very grave. His medical attendants held out little hope.

Dear Sir: I take this opportunity of addressing you as a loyal citizen of Canada, and one who desires her advancement along the lines of moral, intellectual, and financial progress, and I desire to explain to you my position as a supporter of the Conservative party, and my reasons for seeking my position as a member of Customs with the hope that my action may be so endorsed by you in the present crisis.

For the last three years, up to the date of my resignation, I have been a member of the Government, I have been a member of the Cabinet, and therefore not personally responsible for the remedial order in Manitoba, which has been the cause of the present crisis.

It is a question of a chest protector or cough and cold remedies, choose the chest protector every time. The chest protector prevents coughs and colds. It is a sort of insurance policy, and the rule is, buy it now.

OF COURSE I see how that you overheard on conversation last night, and being the case, you naturally suspected me of this robbery. But I am wondering, if you did overheard me, why you did not watch me this night.

"To this Mr. Barnes made no reply. "I have one favor to ask."

"What is it?"

"That you recall to me the fact that I have undertaken to commit a crime. You of course are at liberty to play the ferret and convict me—if you can."

"As surely as you commit a crime, so surely will I convict you of it," replied Mr. Barnes. "It will be perhaps to your interest to keep what I know to myself, but it will not do to make any promises to me. I must be free to act as circumstances demand."

"Very good. I will tell you where I am stopping and I give you permission to call to see me whenever you please, day or night. I have a suit of rooms at the Fifth Avenue. Now let me ask you one question. Do you think I committed this robbery?"

"I will answer you with a question. Did you commit this robbery?"

"Capital! I see I have a foe man worthy of my steel. Well, we will have both questions answered for the present."

CHAPTER III.

MR. BARNES DISCOVERS AN ARTISTIC MURDER.

While the meal was progressing, a man silently passed through the room. No one would have given him a second special notice in doing so, for he had no face. Neither would one have noticed that Mr. Barnes observed him, for he had his back turned. Yet this was the same individual who upon his instruction had followed Rose Mitchell when she left the train.

Breakfast over, the two men started to leave the restaurant. Reaching the doorway which led out to the main floor, Mr. Barnes courteously stood aside to allow his companion to ascend first.

Mr. Mitchell, however, with a wave of the hand, declined and followed Mr. Barnes. Whether either had any special design in this was a thought occurring to the mind of both as they slowly passed up stairs. Mr. Mitchell had a slight advantage, in that, being behind he could watch the detective. There seemed, however, to be little to see. To be sure the man who had passed through the restaurant was fully leaning against the doorway, but as soon as Mr. Barnes' head appeared, and certainly before Mr. Mitchell had been noticed by Mr. Mitchell, he stepped out into the street, crossed over and disappeared into the bank building opposite. Had any signal passed between the two detectives? Mr. Mitchell, despite his shrewdness in sending Mr. Barnes up stairs ahead of him, somehow, yet this is what occurred: Mr. Barnes said and walked away. Mr. Mitchell stood in the doorway, gazing after him till he saw him enter the elevated railroad station; then looking carefully about, he himself walked rapidly toward Sixth Avenue for today anyway, as I must get home.

He had seen the man in the bank step out and walk in the same direction. They had been gone about five minutes when Mr. Barnes came once more appeared upon the scene. He stopped in the doorway, and the other detective had been waiting for him.
